Outline
Mahatma Gandhi, who lived in South Africa from 1893-1914, created a legacy for peace and justice that continues to inspire today, led in South Africa by the Phoenix Settlement Trust he established in 1904 and the Gandhi Development Trust established by his grand-daughter Ela Gandhi.

This webinar will explore contemporary threats to peace and justice in South Africa, the African continent and globally, with a focus on the risks and impacts of nuclear weapons, nuclear energy and war. It will highlight the need to redirect resources from militarism to peace, public health and sustainable development, especially in this time of COVID-19. And it will provide inspiring examples of actions by youth, women, faith-based communities and the United Nations to address these issues. The event commemorates the end of World War II (September 2, 1945), the birth of hope for global peace and the 75th anniversary of the founding of the UN.
